

"SOUTHERN AFRICA TO-DAY"

Pink & Brown ANKH shaped figures are white & black which depict people who will eternally never come together - as people will never all be one and eternally happy.

Dark blue arrows and bullets will weave across the races for a while.

Pink and brown dots are races trying to come together - mainly in communities

Yellow lines and orange arrows is the communist influence - mainly coming from the North, bottom of painting.

Pink and camouflage circles are military and police cells throughout the land.

Three pink bullets are directed to ~~protecting~~ white man - these come from blue roads or direct lines of fire or direction.

Red denotes blood trails.
